STRESS CAN DRIVE BEHAVIOUR

13

"During times of stress, the hypothalamus, a collection of nuclei that connects the brain and the endocrine system, signals the pituitary gland to produce a hormone, which in turn signals the adrenal glands, located above the kidneys, to increase the production of cortisol."

"During a stressful event, an increase in cortisol can provide the energy required to deal with prolonged or extreme challenge."

YOUR DISC PROFILE

Personally, what I love about DISC is the self-awareness piece, and the element of understanding yourself in a more meaningful way ... before you try and understand others!

OTHERS DISC PROFILE

And the other thing that is to love about DISC profiling is the ability to be aware and empathise with other people, and to understand their communication styles! Winner!
